How to write a fundable proposal for the Global Challenges Research Fund

February 2, 2017 | Mark Reed

A revolution is happening in the way we do international development in this country. It is not the end to foreign aid spending that the Daily Mail wants to see. It is a new and very different way of spending our aid budget, which I believe will transform the impact of international development.

Gold standard research informing sustainable, scalable impact

This year, a raft of new development projects will start, led by UK Universities and Research Institutes rather than development agencies. The projects are part of the Government's £1.5 billion Global Challenges Research Fund
